

ਜੀ ਆਇਆਂ ਨੂੰ

Rationale for "Ji Aayean Nu"

The phrase "Ji Aayean Nu" is a warm Punjabi greeting meaning "Welcome" and is often used to express heartfelt hospitality. In the song Tu Jdo Aona by Arjan Dhillon, these words convey a sense of longing, nostalgia, and the deep emotions tied to reuniting with someone special. The hook-line in the song means "I will write WELCOME in the sky with the help of clouds when you will come to meet me."

To visually represent this sentiment, I chose to create the typography using clouds, symbolizing fleeting memories, dreams, and an airy, emotional connection. Clouds reflect the softness of the song's melody while also representing the hope of meeting again. The placement of the text in the sky enhances the feeling of openness, as if the words are floating toward the person being welcomed. The gentle and blended edges of the letters emphasize warmth and sincerity. This design effectively captures the emotional depth of the song, making the words feel as heartfelt as the lyrics themselves.

SUNSHINE

Rationale for “SUNSHINE”

This design visually represents the uplifting and joyful essence of songs that feature the word “Sunshine.” Inspired by feel-good tracks like “Walking on Sunshine” by Katrina and The Waves or “You Are My Sunshine,” the warm, glowing background symbolizes happiness, warmth, and positivity—common themes in such songs.

The text design incorporates a clipping mask effect, allowing the natural sunlight from the background to shine through, much like how music brightens emotions. The bold, playful font echoes the lively and energetic feel of classic sunshine-themed songs, reinforcing their cheerful and nostalgic vibes.

By blending typography with the glowing sunlight, this design visually translates how music about sunshine brings warmth and brightness to listeners, much like real sunshine does to the world.
